

65 Years of Following Those Feathered Friends

Marble Rock - From the Ides of March to the golden crackle of Indian Summer - a North Iowa woman has chronicled the past 65 years through the flash of feathers and the whisper of wings.

An avid bird-watcher, Marble Rock native Pearl Knoop, 92, began listing birds she observed in the spring of 1933. Today, Knoop's journals, ornithology card catalog and some of her first identification books are part of the Iowa Woman's Archives at the University of Iowa Libraries in Iowa City.

"When I hear the call of the killdeer from out in the field, I think of my father," Knoop said, smiling reflectively. "But it all really started with a gift to my mother, a little pocket identification guide. She used it, but I was the one who got hooked."

While wandering the plum groves and grain fields on her parent's farm or trudging along the banks of the nearby Shell Rock River, Knoop developed a passion for the winged creatures inhabiting the area. A country school teacher for several years, she shared her expertise and enthusiasm with students by taking them on nature hikes - binoculars and bird book in hand. Recognized as a living encyclopedia by locals, Knoop was repeatedly consulted through her 17 years as a public librarian when someone caught a glance of some unusual feathered traveler migrating through the area.

Knoop has built a life list of 222 different bird sightings, one or two unusual enough to gain her recognition in the state ornithologist publication, Birds of Iowa.

But it is the interest she has sparked in her nieces and nephews that seems to please Knoop the most. "I gave each family a bird identification book last Christmas," she said. "I told them to use it and they were to give me a list of birds they saw through the year. We'll compare lists this Christmas."

The gift has created some lively competition between family members said Knoop's niece, Pat Fluhrer of Charles City. "It reminds me of the time when my kids were small and Aunt Pearl organized an early morning bird walk then fed us all breakfast in the park," said Fluhrer. "Now my husband and 5-year old grandson have picked it up. Not just making lists, building birdhouses, feeding birds - they are really going to town."

Fluhrer's words brought a gleam of satisfaction to Knoop's eyes. "In the end, I think the little one is going to be making his own list and journals," Knoop said.

Ryan Stewart seems to agree with his great aunt. "I get up early and look for birds every morning out my window. My mom writes down the ones I see," he said. "I saw an Oriole one time, it was black and orange. But Redwing blackbirds are my favorite, I've seen two of those and they sing really high."

Stewart has already learned one of the most important aspects of birdwatching, Knoop said. "You have to be an early riser to be a birder," Knoop said. "On a good morning I would always wish I had gotten up a little earlier."

These days, Knoop wakes early to see which birds have stopped for breakfast at the feeder outside her window in the Rockwell Nursing Home or in the trees lining the edge of the lawn.

Sitting in the garden, Knoop halted her conversation in mid-sentence, lifted her field glasses and searched the shrubbery. "Fall migration is starting," she said. "The birds are harder to identify. Some just haven't gotten colored -up yet, but it's a good time to add to your list."

Bird-watching Journals Are in State Archives

Iowa City - The Iowa Women's Archives of the University of Iowa Libraries in Iowa City collects papers of and about Iowa women from all walks of life.

"These materials have enduring value for historical study," said curator Karen Mason. "We have over 400 collections from journals and diaries to scrapbooks to speeches and personal correspondence." Contained in the archival collection are more than 30 journals written by Marble Rock native Pearl Knoop, 92, an avid birder who compiled a card catalog and life list of 222 birds, spanning six decades.

"Pearl Knoop's journals are more than a list of the birds she saw," Mason said. They are a documentary account of every day life with snippets of her daily activities over 65 years."

The Knoop collection includes a brief biography, a description of the collection and the materials which are stored in acid free folders and boxes for preservation purposes.

There are descriptive fragments of Knoop's daily activities interspersed with the annual listing of birds in herjournals.

 March 7, 1939 - "Teaching in our rural school again. Walking to school in the morning I saw a little red bird sitting on the highline and two more eating weed seedbelow. They were Redpolls, a winter bird."

 March 23, 1952 - "Snow flurries and rather cold today. There were about 20 horned larks feeding in the pig pen when I was doing chicken chores this morning." Such entries make the Knoop journals an "incredible" addition to the archives, according to Mason, who said the documentation of simple living is as historically important as preserving the daily activities of notable women.

"Knoop's collection is another way to show, for historical purposes, how a woman organized her daily life," Mason said. "And so many of the entries are just incredible. I believe her bird watching was a passion for Knoop, perhaps even more than her career as a teacher and librarian."

The Iowa Women's Archives is located on the third floor of the Main Library on the University of Iowa campus and is open to the public. Their website address is http:// www.lib.uiowa.edu/iwa/

Iowa Ornithologists' Union Fall Meeting September 11-13, 1998

Des Moines Audubon hosted the Fall 1998 meeting of Iowa Ornithologists'Union at Easter Seals' Camp Sunnyside, in celebration of the 75th anniversary of both organizations. Social time and registration were held at the camp on Friday evening, in addition to a book signing event at Barnes and Noble, with our guest, Pete Dunne. Field trips were held both Saturday and Sunday mornings, and slide programs were presented in the afternoon on Saturday, including a hawk workshop by Pete Dunne,"Cinderellas of the Avian World", by Eugene and Eloise Armstrong, and the"IOU Birding Trip to Mexico", by Rick Hollis. PeteDunne also spoke for the evening program, and captivated the audience with history," Small-headed Flycatcher. Seen Yesterday. He Didn't Leave His Name." Over 120 people registered for some part of the weekend.

IOU Field Trip Report By Dennis Thompson

One of the main activities of an Iowa Ornithologists' Union meeting is, of course, birdwatching. Five field trips were offered each day:

•Dick and Sharon Stilwell led birders to the southwest area of the metro, including Brown's Woods, Walnut Woods, and Raccoon River Park. They also had the responsibility for showing everyone the famous Amazilia hummingbird. The Stilwell's reported good numbers of warblers both days, and a Trumpeter Swan at Raccoon River Park on Sunday was very unexpected.

 Maridel Jackson took a group to Voas and Brenton Slough in Dallas County. They also had good numbers of warblers, along with Soras, coots, and other marsh birds.

 Phil Walsh's tour visited Chichaqua Bottoms Greenbelt and Errington Marsh. American Bitterns and Northern Harriers were highlights of that trip.

•The Runnells/Neal Smith National Wildlife Refuge trip was led by Ann Johnson on Saturday, with Jim Sinclair leading it on Sunday. Shorebirds and sparrows were the highlights, including good numbers of American Golden Plovers, Buff-breasted Sandpipers, and Stilt Sandpipers. A Marbled Godwit was unusual for fall. Two Peregrine Falcons and a Bald Eagle were also nice finds.

• Dennis Thompson led a large contingent around Saylorville Lake both days. Both Oak Grove Beach and Polk City Wildlife Areas were productive, but the best birding was at the mudflats at Jester Park. Over 1,000 White Pelicans and numerous shorebirds, including Sanderlings and two Red-necked Phalaropes were seen by the group. A young Peregrine Falcon provided a nice show as it harassed the flocks before landing on a nearby mudflat!

There were 151 species recorded for both days, despite the unseasonably warm weather. Ten species of raptors, eighteen different shorebirds, and twenty species of warblers give an indication of the good mix of birds present and the variety of habitats explored.

Local Birding

Jim Dinsmore, Ames

In early September one of my students mentioned to me that he had seen what he was certain was an ibis at a flooded field south of Ames. Obviously the ibis raised my interest but I also was puzzled since I did not know anything about the wetland he described. I visited the site the next day and although the ibis was no longer there, I did find a flooded field of an acre or two that had a number of shorebirds.

The wetland was obviously formed by a plugged drainage tile since it was in the midst of a corn field. I told several others about the site and, since it was only a few miles from my house, began visiting it on a regular basis, recording what species and how many of each were present. These visits soon became addictive as I kept finding "new" species as migration progressed through the fall.

I also often found Hank Zaletel there, and we began comparing notes. The pond held water well and shrank slowly through the fall until late October when the landowner cleaned out the plugged up tile. After that, its level dropped rapidly and finally, on 29 November, it was dry.

In all, I visited the site 40 times, with my last sighting of any wetland birds on 18 November. I saw a total of 25 wetland species at the site including 7 waterfowl species and 14 shorebird species. Besides the wetland species, I also saw a Prairie Falcon (killing a snipe on 8 Nov) and 20 Brewer's Blackbirds on 6 Nov as well as a number of other nonwetland species. I suspect that Hank may have seen a few species that I missed.

Other interesting finds were a record early (for Story County) fall Northern Shoveler and record late county records for American Golden-Plover, Least Sandpiper, Pectoral Sandpiper, and Franklin's Gull. On a personal level, I saw five species there (Prairie Falcon, Sandpiper, Long-billed Buff-breasted Dowitcher, American Pipit, Brewer's Blackbird) that I had never seen before in Story County where I have resided for 23+ years. The falcon was also a state first for me. The whole point of this little note is to point out how persistent watching at an interesting local area led to some interesting sightings that easily could have been missed.

For the record, here are the wetland species that I saw there. The first number is the number of visits (out of 40) on which that species was present. The second is the maximum number seen.

Endangered and Threatened Species Proposal

The Iowa Department of Natural Resources has proposed some changes in the species it lists as Threatened and Endangered in Iowa. The new list would replace the most recent list which was accepted in 1994. In terms of birds, the proposed list would list 7 species as endangered, 4 as threatened, and 9 as of special concern, compared to 9 endangered, 2 threatened, and 2 special concern species on the 1994 list. Specifically, the proposed list would include the following species:

Proposed Status Species Current Status American Bittern Not Listed Special Concern Least Bittern Not Listed Special Concern Black-Crowned Night-Heron Not Listed Special Concern Bald Eagle Threatened Endangered Northern Harrier Endangered Endangered Red-Shouldered Hawk Endangered Endangered Broad-winged Not Listed Hawk Special Concern Peregrine Endangered Endangered Falcon King Rail Endangered Endangered Piping Plover Endangered Endangered Endangered Least Tern Endangered Forster's Tern Special Concern Special Concern Black Tern Special Concern Special Concern Barn Owl Endangered Endangered Long-eared Owl Threatened Threatened Short-eared Owl Endangered Endangered Least Flycatcher Not Listed Special Concern Veery Not Listed Special Concern Cerulean Warbler Not Listed Special Concern Henslow's Threatened Threatened Sparrow

Thus, under the proposed list, 2 species would be listed at a lower category (Bald Eagle, Red-shouldered Hawk), 11 would remain at the same category, and 7 new species would be listed. The Iowa DNR is accepting written comments on the proposed list through 8 January 1999. Comments should be sent to the Division on Parks, Recreation, and Preserves, Iowa Department of Natural Resources, Wallace State Office Building, Des Moines, IA 50319-0034.

Notes from the Editors

There will not be a Winter Bird Feeder Survey this year. Graduate students from Iowa State University are currently working on a paper that will evaluate the data from past surveys. This paper should be published in Iowa Bird Life in 1999.

For those of you who were not able to attend the Fall IOU meeting in Des Moines this past fall, Jim Dinsmore, current editor of Iowa Bird Life, submitted his resignation effective January 1, 2000. If you are interested in becoming editor, contact any member of the Publications Committee or President Mark Proescholdt.

Upcoming meetings - April 30-May2, 1999 at Centerville sponsored by the Rathbun Bird Club - tentatively the Fall 1999 meeting will be held in Ottumwa.

A Rare Afternoon by Mary Lou Petersen, Davenport

Occasionally, never often, just frequently enough to give birders hope for each new day, you have a day such as I had on Wednesday, 16 September, 1998. I was at home washing windows from the inside of my house in the early afternoon. I noticed an Ovenbird, then an American Redstart, and then a Blue-headed Vireo. So began a most enjoyable and exciting afternoon during which I racked up forty species of birds seen in or from my yard, including eleven warbler species.

Immediately after spotting the Blueheaded Vireo, I went outside and turned up the water drip into my bird bath. The bath is made of limestone rocks and concrete and sits directly on the ground under a yew. The bath is visible from the living room picture window.

From about 3:00 P.M. to 5:00 P.M. sitting very comfortably in an easy chair with my binoculars (not needed to see the bird bath), I saw the following species use the bath: Blackcapped Chickadee, Swainson's Thrush, American Robin, Blue-winged Warbler, Golden-winged Warbler, Nashville Warbler, Chestnut-sided Warbler, Magnolia Warbler, Black and White Warbler, American Redstart, Ovenbird, Canada Warbler, and a Purple Finch. I also saw a Bay-breasted Warbler and a Bicknell's Thrush which did not bathe. All warblers except Blue-winged and Canada were seen in multiples of two to five at the bath.

Later in the early evening from my driveway, I saw a Scarlet Tanager eating cedar berries and a Least Flycatcher chasing insects from a dead branch on that same cedar tree. A number of migrating Common Nighthawks were seen high above the driveway. All in all it was a most satisfying day.
